when holland hall was built, there were only 25 countries discovered in the world, now there are...195...and we're still standing - we are holland hall - est. 1654

our history

we are a 17th-century grade II listed building proudly retaining much of the original 'holland house' - baroque features, like the pedimented door have been lovingly restored - the 'boardroom' was uncovered during renovations when a wall revealed a stunning fireplace and wattle & daub

In 1966, our owner, bill kenyon, brought his wife here on their first date and with no staff, guests helped themselves and recorded purchases in an honesty book - bill's fond memories led him to become the proprietor a two-mile tunnel links the hall to the church beneath the pub - once used by priests for escape, it's now visible through a glass floor above the cellar renovations uncovered hidden staircases, tunnels and priest-holes, including one behind a wardrobe in the priory suite, where a coat hood with cassock tassels remains many more surprising discoveries are still to be found...
